Approval of Minutes

1. Action: The minutes of the meeting of 23 August 1951 (IAC-M-42) were approved.

Indications of Soviet Intentions to Initiate General War (IAC-D-33)

2. Action: It was agreed that General Bolling's proposal should be pursued and that the IAC should establish a check list of most significant indicators in the following manner:
  - a. Each IAC agency should list all indicators of Soviet intentions to initiate general war which fall within an agency's sphere of primary responsibility without regard to length.
  - b. O/CI in CIA should then combine these lists to be examined by a representative group for the purpose of selecting the most significant factors from the combined list.
  - c. The final list will be submitted to the IAC for approval.
3. Discussion: Mr. Armstrong expressed his concern that the effort to select out only the most significant indicators might lead to a mechanical handling of the watching process. He believed that certain indications of Soviet intentions could be discovered only by attending to all information, even the relatively obscure and seemingly minor facets of Soviet behavior. General Smith indicated that this venture would not detract from the screening of all possible information nor was there any thought that the watching process should or would be made mechanical by the adoption of an IAC check list. He indicated further that the focusing on major and most significant indicators could serve to make more systematic our watching process.
4. General Smith noted that there would likely be within the U. S. indicators of impending crisis, the responsibility for which would fall on the FBI and that therefore its contribution would be highly desirable.

India's Position in the East-West

5. Action: This estimate was approved as revised.

6. Discussion: In connection with paragraph 18 of this paper General Smith raised the question of the desirability of intelligence indicating to the policy makers the losses in terms of strategic raw materials in the event certain countries were overrun or lost to the access of the West. There was general agreement that this was a proper mission of intelligence and the members were invited to give this matter some thought in anticipation of such a study in the near future. It was pointed out that certain of these factors would come to light in the preparation of NIE-40 which would deal in part with the value of the satellite and Western Europe to the Soviets and by inference the loss which the West would sustain in the latter case. -

7. Action: This estimate was approved as revised. In this connection reference was made to the digest of this paper for use in the preparation of SE-10, the pertinent portion of which will be referred to the Interdepartmental Intelligence Conference by Mr. Keay who will report its suggestions to Dr. Langer. It was understood however that the reference of the major part of SE-10 to JIG need not be held up pending the FBI report.
